1. Implement the counting sort algorithm and compare its running time to your other sorts. You should see a significant speedup!

2. Use induction to prove that radix sort works. Where does your proof need the assumption that the intermediate sort is stable?

3. Implement the radix sort algorithm on integers between 0 and 999, inclusive. As usual, compare its running time to your other sorting algorithms.